HARDING PLANS TO DEFEND HIS ACTS ON STUMP

President Will Appeal On Western Tour During Summer For Support

TO EXHIBIT PRIDE

Will Challenge Critics To Comparison Of His And Their Policies

By G. R. HOLMES

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 2.—President Harding is planning a frank appeal to the country to support the foreign policies of his administration, it was learned here today.

A considerable portion of the speeches which he will deliver on his western tour this summer will be devoted to a vigorous exposition and defense of the foreign policies which have been pursued for the last two years.

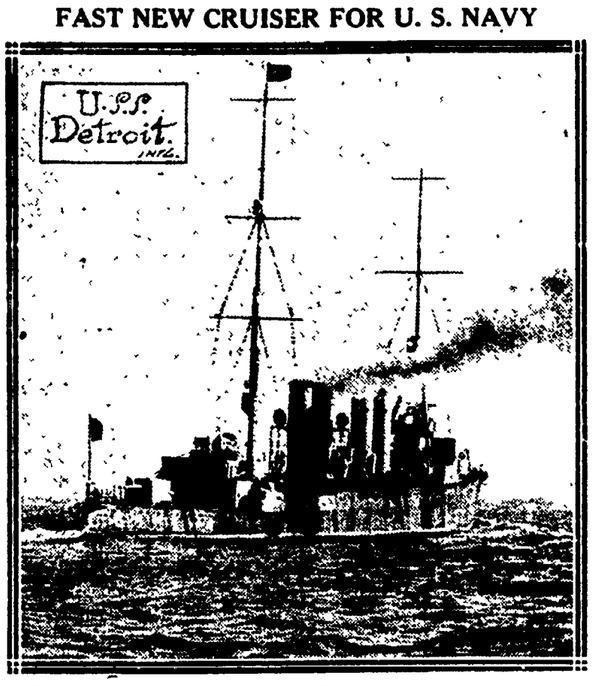

Something more than a mere defense of the Republican policy is planned—instead of simply defending the record, the president plans to make a militant presentation for accomplishments of his administration and then challenge the Democrats and the critics within his own party to a public comparison of policies.

Harding will not appear in the role of an apologist, but rather as an apostle of achievement, according to those who are concerned as to mapping his trip and his program.

The administration's defense of its record in foreign affairs is ex-

PROMINENT BEDFORD-TP MAN TAKES OWN LIFE MONDAY AS RESULT OF WORRY OVER WORK

Albert L. Reed, 65, Dies From Effects of Wound Inflicted With Shotgun In Field

Albert L. Reed, 65, a prominent Bedford-tp farmer, residing on Coshocton Route 6, committed suicide at his home early Monday morning by shooting himself with a shotgun.

His body was discovered about nine o'clock by Roy Ogle, who was working on the farm for him. The body was a distance from the house, and none of the family heard the report of the shotgun. It is believed that he shot himself about eight o'clock.

Worry over his farm work is the only reason that could be assigned for his act by the family. The members of the family told Coroner E. M. Wright that Mr. Reed had been worrying over the scarcity of help, and was afraid he would be unable to perform much of the work himself.

Albert Reed was born in Bedford-tp. Before taking up the occupation of farming, he taught school in Jackson and Bedford-tps.

He married Miss Isabelle Haines, who survives him. Two children, Edwin and Viola, five brothers, Marion J. Reed, of Jackson-tp, Franklin E. whose whereabouts are unknown; W. D. Reed, of Bedford-tp, Aaron E. Reed, of West Bedford and J. M. Reed, of Bedford-tp, and two sisters, Mrs. James Miller, of Bedford-tp and Mrs. George Meek, of Virginia-tp, also survive.

The body was brot to the Peoples morgue, where it was prepared for burial. Plans for the funeral services had not been completed early Monday afternoon.

ANOTHER WORLD WAR AND CIVILIZATION'S END IS THREATENED

Former Secretary Of War Under Wilson Counsels Hurried Entrance Into The League Of Nations And Assumption Of Dictator in World Affairs

CLEVELAND, April 2.—"If means are not taken to prevent another world war, civilization will be destroyed," Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in President Wilson's cabinet told an audience at the final public forum of the winter, held in Engineers Hall, last night.

"We must enter the league of nations," was his conclusion, the senate can make every sort of reservation it desires—even reservations satisfactory to Senator Lodge. Some day we will act, and when we do the United States will sit at the head of the conference table, then it will control the destinies of the world.

"President Harding's plan for an international court is all right, but that court can never do the work of the league of nations. It is bound to be a legal tribunal only. Lawyers cannot settle world problems for their dealings are with matters of the past."

Credit Bureau Is Formed For Mutual Profit

Elimination of 'Dead Beat' Aimed At In Effort To Improve System

MANY STORES JOIN

A credit bureau which will have on file for use of merchants paying for the service, a record of the ability and willingness of all rural and city buyers to pay for merchandise, has been organized by Coshocton business men and will be in operation by April 15, it was announced Monday.

Each person will have a card on which his rating will be carried. If he pays his bills as promptly as possible, he will be able to obtain credit at any of the stores using the service without trouble. If he is delinquent in his payments, he will experience difficulty in getting credit anywhere.

The local bureau will affiliate with similar organizations in other cities, and ratings of persons moving back and forth will be exchanged.

In other cities, where the credit bureaus are in operation, the habitual "dead beat" is extinct, local merchants say. After he fails to pay what he owes to one merchant, he finds that no others will trust him.

"The need for a Credit Bureau has long been apparent to the majority of Coshocton business people" remarked a leader in the movement today, "and this is emphasized by the fact that close to 100 have already subscribed for the first year.

"We believe the majority of charge account customers realize that the merchants do them a favor, when they sell them goods on credit, without any interest charges, but some have taken advantage of this, under the old unorganized method. This will be impossible, however, under the Bureau plan, for each subscriber will be able to determine accurately and definitely, those who are unfair and in some instances, actually dishonest and any further credit will not be extended to this class of customers.

"Our plan is to use the individual index card system and as the ratings will be made from each members ledgers, we expect to have close to 10,000 names on file. These records are to be kept in a central office and will be accessible to members only.

FLIGHT FAILURE BUT LESSONS ARE AID TO SERVICE

DAYTON, April 2—Lieutenants John A. MacReady and Oakley G Kelley, learned some valuable lessons for the air service on their recent attempt to break the world endurance record.

They have submitted a full report of their experience while in the air, dealing with a new high compression Liberty motor, and the use of a mixture of benzol and gasoline which was used for fuel.

Before T-2 starts again a new motor will be installed, it was said, and other fuel probably will be used.

A complete check up of the eight hour flight Friday night has demonstrated some valuable points, which had come up and the air service expected the results to be valuable in planning further flights.

The new motor will be installed in the T-2 this week and held in readiness for the next flight.

SIX ST. LOUIS BANDITS GET NINE POUCHES OF VALUABLE MAIL IN A DARING HOLD-UP

Loot Will Probably Run Into Six Figures When Missing Registered Packages Are Checked Up—Early Morning Job In River District Goes Thru Without A Hitch—Guards Locked In Cage At Point Of Many Guns

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 2.—Six men in an automobile staged a daring holdup of a government mail truck here early today and escaped with nine registered mail pouches containing large sums of money.

Postal authorities cannot estimate the amount taken until a check is made.

The robbery occurred in the downtown district. A chauffeur and guard on the mail truck were locked in the cage of the machine when the bandits commandeered it.

The truck was then driven to the river district where the nine mail bags were taken from the cage and loaded into the bandits' car.

Authorities announced that the amount taken may run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars as the mail was for distribution among business houses. Large amounts of cash and money orders are contained in the mails for monthly settlements.

A general alarm was sounded for the apprehension of the bandits who sped away in their machine.

The robbery occurred at 6:20 this morning, an hour when the river district is practically deserted.

She waited until her sister and her fellow came out of the show and followed them down Main-st At the corner of Fourth she lost her patience, and decided to relieve her injured feelings immediately.

AUTO PLUNGES OFF ABANDONED ROAD ALONG THE RIVER

An automobile, said to be owned by a Newark man by the name of James, rolled off the old river road west of the Zerbe addition late Saturday night, and was considerably damaged.

The two occupants of the car were said to have been injured, but did not remain in this city.

The driver of the car evidently failed to follow the paved road when he reached the Brown farm but took the dirt road straight along the river bank. At a point west of the Zerbe addition the road has been washed away, and it was there that the car went over.

The old river road was abandoned in 1920, but the south end has never been barricaded. A barricade has been erected at the north end of the road opposite Mulberry-st, and the county commissioners were planning Monday to erect a barricade at the south end immediately.

There are several residences on the old road, and altho there are other means of ingress and egress, the old road has been left open for their convenience.

SAVANTS AGAINST COLLEGE MARRIAGE

Most of Syracuse Educators Think There's Plenty of Time Afterwards

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 2 — No marriages for students.

That's the rallying cry of Syracuse University educators as the result of the growing frequency here of undergraduate romances. Here is what faculty members at Syracuse University think about it:

Rev. R. Fortenbaugh, head of the department of sociology—"There is more objection to marriage for women undergraduates than men. The practice should be discouraged. It is unwise, if not wrong. The aim of marriage ought to be to establish a home and carry on the function of family life. When a girl is married and going to school at the same time either the family or her college work suffers."

ADVISES AGAINST IT

Louis Mitchell, dean of the college of engineers—"It is not advisable except in exceptional cases. If a man is over 25 and financially able to support a wife there is no objection to his marrying while he is in college. We have several married men in engineering and I can't see that it makes any difference in their work."

Harry W. Hepner, department of psychology—"It depends a great deal on the individuals and upon how much each is willing to sacrifice. Up to the age of 20 we are going thru a process of recapitulation, a sort of summarizing process, and the girl that a man would choose while he is in college he would want to marry a few years later. Anywhere from 21 to 30 is a good age to marry."

MUCH WISER TO WAIT.

Eugene Bradford, director of admissions—"It is decidedly wiser to wait until they know their own minds and are sure of themselves."

T. W. B. Crafer and L. C. Sweeting, department of economics, interviewed jointly—"In these times of the high cost of living undergraduates who marry have sublime courage. Speaking economically and considering the cost of apartments in Syracuse, two men live about as cheaply as five. From a scholastic point of view, it might keep them from other frivolities and help them to concentrate.

"Seriously, tho, statistics from all the colleges show that their ranks could not be filled up from their own numbers. Assuming that the student has sufficient financial means, it is better to encourage marriage among selected groups like college people than among the lower strata."

John O. Simmons, department of journalism—"As a general rule it is better to wait. However, marriage does steady a student and enable him to study better. It is true, too, that too long a postponement sometimes means postponing marriage forever."

Carl T. Hawley, fine arts—"I do not think it is advisable. There is plenty of time afterward."

C. C. Bushnell, liberal art—"I think Latin is good for the undergraduate, but I don't know anything about marriage."

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

Sixth St. Theatre

"TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR ROOM."

It's simply wonderful what a hold "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" as presented by the excellent company of players, selected by Arthur C. Aiston and James W. Castle, have on the public, while many of the big road attractions are silently folding their tents and returning to New York, from lack of appreciation, this company is meeting with success everywhere.

Many are asking, Why? The answer is very simple, the public are getting tired of so many plays that have nothing in them but scenery and costumes, they want something that will reach the heart, something that will interest them from start to finish, and that is what this grand old classic can boast of, a heart story that hits and grips, with dramatic scenes and situations, and climaxes that have a meaning to them, and to this may be added a company of actors, who can act, tells the story of the success of the play. The company carries its own scenic production, painted by the William Castle New York Studio.

"Ten Nights in a Bar Room" is the next attraction at the 6th St. Theatre appearing Tuesday and Wednesday with a matinee Wednesday.

"TAKE IT FROM ME"

"TAKE IT FROM ME" the snappy and delightful musical comedy which has made a theatrical record will come to the Sixth St. Theatre, Monday, April 16.

"Take It From Me" is touring under the direction of Jos. M. Gaites. The story and lyrics by Will B. Johnstone and the score by Will Anderson, the two who are responsible for some of the best musical comedy successes of recent years.

The cast, chorus and production have been held intact since the day the musical comedy was produced and this city is fortunate in securing an original cast of players with such an unusual musical comedy. The cast includes Alice Hills, Marjorie Sweet, Robert Capron, Joseph M. Wilton, Myra Treska, Beach Cooke, Frank Gardinar, Chic Burnham, Charles Welsh Homer, Henry W. Pemberton, Kathleen Butler, Jane Hazleton, Marjorie Fielding, Robert Hart, Bud Lorraine, Dorothy Dana, Earl Welding, Charles Heffron, and a large chorus of beautiful girls.

ENGLISH AGAINST U. S. NEGRO REVUE

Importation of Colored Show Folk Held Discrimination Against Unemployed

LONDON, April 2.—The negro problem has come to London.

Sir Alfred Butt has announced his intention of opening a cabaret at the Empire Theatre, with a troupe of American negro performers. Certain sections of the British press have taken this as the basis for a campaign against the introduction of colored theatrical talent into England.

Hannen Swaffer, in the Daily Graphic, is conducting a bitter campaign under the heading of "The Scandal of Negro Revues."

Sam Salvin, of New York, is bringing the company to London, and it will be headed by Florence Mills, who has won some fame for herself along Broadway.

"London's ordinary white actors and actresses are naturally gravely concerned about the question of unemployment, which will be accentuated by the wholesale importation of negro artists into a country where they do not belong," Swaffer says.

"If good revue artists are wanted, why is Nelson Keys not working now? And why is Daphne Pollard not in a show? They are two of the finest revue artists who have ever appeared in any country in the world."

Swaffer goes on to name nearly a hundred prominent English actors and actresses who are now without engagements. He also bitterly attacks American actors who have come to England and makes all sorts of charges against them, including charges that they do not pay England income taxes upon their earnings while in this country.

The storm rages, but Sir Alfred Butt still plans to open his colored revue at the Empire.

TREE DISEASES LIVE OVER IN DEAD WOOD

Many diseases of fruit and ornamental trees pass the winter in cankers on the branches which if not removed and destroyed, become fruitful sources for the spread of the disease, according to botanists of the Experiment Station.

In the spring pruning, all dead branches and stubs are cut close so that healing will be rapid and complete. The diseased prunings must be burnt, for if left on the ground spores will develop and still further spread the disease.

It is usually best to remove trees which have become so badly infested that it is impossible to check the progress of the disease as they are unsightly and serve to infect neighboring trees.

Diseases and insect pests are harbored in rubbish of various kinds which should not be allowed to accumulate for sanitary reasons as well as for the sake of appearance.

CORN COMES BACK AS PAYING CROP IN OHIO

Farms Which Lost on It in 1921 Probably Made Something in 1922; Farmers Open Books

Corn came back as a paying crop on most Ohio farms in 1922, according to the records of a number of Ohio farmers who are keeping accounts in cooperation with the rural economics department of the Ohio State University.

The cost of raising a bushel of corn dropped, on the average, from 67 cents in 1921 to about 60 cents in 1922. A rising market throughout the year 1922 brought the sales price up from around 50 cents to above 80 cents a bushel.

University economists who give out these figures cite as representative the experience of 48 Greene County farmers who are on a cost accounting route there. These men in 1922 raised corn at a per-bushel cost varying from 45 to 85 cents a bushel. The average was 60 cents a bushel. Of this amount, 15 cents was a land charge, covering rent or interest on investment.

By November, the average price commanded by this corn was 65 cents a bushel. Those of the farmers who have some of their crop still to sell can get 85 cents a bushel for it. Most of the crops is, of course, long since sold, and at a narrower profit, but even those who sold in November probably broke even.

That half of the farms which showed the highest cost per bushel raised an average of 9 bushels less to the acre than the other half of the farms, with the lower production cost. "High yield," the economists explain, "means low unit cost.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Here's Grandmother's Recipe To Darken And Beautify Faded Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous

Cattle Feeders' Day Ohio Station, May 4

Cattle Feeders' Day at the Ohio Experiment Station will be held Friday, May 4, it was announced at the Station today.

Station authorities are planning for a bigger event with a more varied program than the like event last year which attracted livestock men from all over Ohio and from a half dozen other states.

In fact, the event will start with Swine Day, the previous afternoon, Thursday, May 3, when the results of different feed combinations as shown by the many pens of porkers will be explained. This will be followed in the evening by a banquet at a downtown hall to which all visitors are to be invited.

This will leave all the next day for the cattle display and discussions, it was explained.

The year's experiments promise many good lessons, it is said, and there will be something of interest every minute from Thursday noon until Friday evening.

BALL PLAYERS DEMAND VOTE ON NAT'L COM.

Ultimatum Sent To Judge Landis; Officers Refuse to Comment On It

CHICAGO, April 2.—An ultimatum demanding that the major league ball players' union be given representation on the national commission was received at the offices of Commissioner Landis here today. Such representation, the communication asserts, is "absolutely necessary in order that the players may be assured that they are being fairly dealt with by the club owners."

Judge Landis, Ban Johnson, president of the American league, and John Heydler, president of the National league, at present constitute the national baseball commission.

The ultimatum was sent from Milwaukee by Ray Cannon, an attorney and former baseball player, who organized the ball players' union. The communication was signed by the executive board of the national baseball players' association.

"You have made laws and regulations binding upon the ball players," the communication declares. "You have laid down ironclad rules to be enforced against the ball players, without the players being given a voice in the creation of the laws governing them.

"You have set the terms of the players' contracts and have passed upon all the vital baseball problems which directly affect the ball players and rendered decisions without the advice and counsel of the players.

"For these reasons the players' association demands that a representative be given a seat, a voice and a vote on the national baseball commission and full power to participate in all its business sessions.

"The national commission is requested to give the players' demand early consideration and advise whether or not the demand will be granted or refused.

Cannon over long distance phone would not say what action would be taken in the event the national commission rejected the demand. He said the executive board would meet as soon as the reply was received.

Judge Landis was not in his office when the communication was received. He is in Florida touring the spring training camps. His secretary, Leslie O'Connel, declined to comment.

Johnson said: "It is my understanding that the American league players are not interested in this union. The ultimatum from the union does not mention the American league but asserts that 'the great majority of the players in the National league have become members of the association.'"

PECORA QUESTIONS MITCHELL AND THE MODEL'S BROTHER

NEW YORK, April 2. — The man who planned to blackmail J. Kearsley Mitchell, of Philadelphia, wealthy patron of Dorothy King, Broadway butterfly, who was mysteriously murdered, will be grilled by Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora some time next week, Pecora said.

"When I am thru with my minute examination of Mr. Mitchell I shall examine the man who I know planned to blackmail Mr. Mitchell," said Pecora while awaiting the wealthy Philadelphian's appearance.

"I know the man's name and I can lay my hands on him whenever I want to. I do not intend to question Mr. Mitchell on his actions with Miss King. I am only interested with things having to do with the death of Miss King," Pecora declared today.

The conference between Pecora and Mitchell took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Mitchell was accompanied by his attorneys. Just before entering Pecora's office, Olcott, one of the attorneys, denied that Mitchell and his wife had separated over the disclosure of Mitchell's relations with the "Broadway butterfly."

Pecora was in high spirits following his examination of John Keenan, brother of the murdered girl, and gave the assembled reporters the impression that he had at last struck a lead that promised to bring results. Pecora announced that he would not question any others of the Keenan family today.

British Clergyman Says U. S. Bakes in Its Homes And Freezes In Street

LONDON, April 2. It's a terrible country, America. You may set that down on the word of a cleric, one of England's most distinguished.

Rev. H. R. L. Sheppard, Vicar of St. Martins-in-the-Fields, recently wrote to his friends in London as follows:

"We both have violent colds, which I do not think will disappear until we get back to the dear land of fog.

"It is impossible to shake off a cold when life is spent hurrying from a steam-heated room into an ice-bound street and back again. Those kindly and dear Americans have a way of getting frozen in their streets and then baking themselves in their houses until they have to drink iced water and get cool."

Britain Designs Husky New Aeroplane Motors

LONDON, April 2—Air liners, able with ease to carry a hundred passengers safely across the Atlantic to America, will, it is claimed, become more than a possibility with the use of the new 1600 horsepower aero engines now being designed for the British Air Ministry.

The new engines, which are the most powerful ever built, are of the semi-Diesel type and will burn crude gasoline.

Good Night Stories

PEGGY COMES TO THE RESCUE

WHY, you mean little thing!" Peggy cried, catching hold of the little bug that dropped on her pretty white apron. "Do you want to soil my nice new apron?" And she flung the little intruder to the ground, and was about to crush it with her foot when a sad, plaintive voice startled her.

"Don't try to pretend you don't know who's speaking," squeaked the tiny bug with the black dots on its back. "It's I, Lady-bug. Please don't step on me. I haven't done you any harm, have I?"

"No, you haven't," replied Peggy. "I'm dreadfully sorry I was rude. I hope I didn't hurt you when I threw you on the ground. So you're the dear little lady-bug I hear Daddy sing about almost every night when he puts Sister to sleep. I'm sorry I was rude. I hope you'll forget it this time. I was afraid you'd spoil my clean apron."

"Not I," laughed Mrs. Lady-bug gayly. "You're forgiven, and to forgive means to forget, so we're even.

"So your daddy sings a nice song about me, does he? I suppose it goes something like this:

"Lady-bug, lady-bug, fly away home.
Your house is on fire and your children will burn.'

"I've heard it a million times. I'm glad, though, that your daddy likes to sing about me, for I try every day to help him."

"What do you do to help my daddy?" Peggy asked in astonishment. "How can a very tiny little creature like yourself help my daddy, I'd like to know?"

"My goodness! I certainly hope he knows that I'm working for him," said Mrs. Lady-bug. "I work hard from rise to set of sun, and sometimes that old sun just about blisters my little back. When I was quite young I asked my mother if staying out in the sun all day long was the reason why my back was red. Yes, indeed, I work for your daddy every day. Surely you know the great work we do?"

"No, I don't believe I've ever heard Daddy say what you did," replied Peggy. "But I can't imagine how such a wee lady as you could help him."

"Why, in some places here in America," continued Mrs. Lady-bug, "I'm told the farmers obtain great numbers of us lady-bugs and turn us loose on their land to devour the plant-lice and other small insects that feed in the gardens.

"So you see, that's the reason your daddy sings such nice songs about me every evening. He knows my worth, I'll wager anything. If you'll excuse me now I'll hurry home and look after those children of mine that the song tells about."

And, spreading her dainty little wings, Mrs Lady-bug called a merry good-by to Peggy and sailed away, while Peggy ran into the house.

That evening when Daddy started to sing his little bug song, Peggy asked him about Mrs. Lady-bug.

Peggy's daddy told her that Mrs. Lady-bug was one of the best workers he had in the garden, that she was always welcome in the garden and that Peggy must always be kind to little Mrs. Lady-bug.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Disclosure Linda Unwittingly Made to Madge.

"WHASS eatin' you?" Linda demanded thickly. "Sight of your own face frighten you? You'll be scared worse than that before Gracie gets through with you."

"My lips are so swollen," I said slowly.

Indeed, I was speaking but the truth for the gag Grace Draper had put upon my mouth was no child's toy. But I was glad, indeed, that I had the excuse pat for Linda's ears, thankful also that she had not been in a position to see in the mirror what I had beheld.

For if I had not been the victim of an hallucination, I had seen in the mirror the reflection of some one passing outside the transomed door, some one near and dear to me. Under pretence of examining my swollen lips I looked intently into the mirror, noting the position and details of the door opposite the mirror, whose partly-opened transom above had given me the glimpse of the flitting figure outside.

It was clearly a door into another room. I could see the outlines of a fireplace like that in the room assigned to me, and through a similar door with a transom above I had just entered. The room to which I had been brought and this other, no doubt, once had been designed as a suite with bath between.

I dared not prolong my scrutiny, and turning as if in search of a towel, I sent my eyes quickly around the room. A window was the only other opening, a window which led to the outdoors, but which I saw was securely barred.

Madge's Courage Is Fired.

"Say, how long 're you going to be?" Linda demanded, not ill-naturedly, however. "Think I've got nothing to do but wait around for you? I've got important business on hand, I have."

She had the touch of arrogance which the first stage of intoxication often gives. I hastened to appease her. I did not know how I could make use of her weakness, but I meant to play upon it if possible.

"Coming this minute," I said meekly. "I'm sorry to have kept you waiting."

"Oh, thass all right," she replied with an evident attempt at magnanimity, and I followed her back into the room I had left with the fragments of a dozen mad plans revolving in my brain.

The glimpse I had received of the figure in the mirror had fired my courage, and I meant to let no slightest chance of getting out of the room slip past me because of my own weakness or indecision.

With every nerve tense, every sense alert, I drank the hot tea Linda had brought, and ate the food which accompanied it. While I did so, I minutely surveyed every square foot of walls, ceiling and floor of the room which was my prison.

A Charming Prison.

It was a most charming and comfortable prison. I had to admit that—a cozy, low ceilinged room with wide casement windows curtained in hand-blocked chintz with the same costly and exquisite fabric reproduced in draperies and cushions on every hand. A desk, a bookcase, a reading table of old mahogany harmonized with the bedroom furnishings of the same beautiful wood, while the hooked rugs on the floor and the old prints on the walls were things to make a collector emerald with envy. Linda noticed my admiring glances, and good-naturedly played cicerone.

"Thiah is old wing of house," she said, patently trying her best to speak slowly. "It's awful old, pretty nearly two hundred, I guess. See what a mess the heating is."

She walked to the radiator installed in a recess between the broad windows, and pushed one of the exquisite old hooked rugs aside with her feet.

"Look here," she said, and I saw a depression in the floor with a large jagged hole in it through which passed the pipe connecting the radiator with some other below.

"Old man owns this place is a nut," Linda declared with emphasis. "This hole in floor was here in his great-grandfather's time—rat hole, I expect, and he wouldn't let any other be cut for the radiator pipe. So they ran it through here to the room below. Makes it fine for one thing though, and I'm the only one who knows it. Oh!"

She clapped her hand over her mouth as might a child who had unwittingly betrayed a secret, and looked at me in wide-eyed ludicrous dismay. As I gave no sign of interest, however, she breathed more freely, and hastily pulled the rug to its former place again.

"I'm not going talk to you any more," she said crossly, with a sudden ridiculous air of authority. "You're too fresh. Give me that tray and sit down there quiet till I tell you you can get up."

I was barely seated in the chair to which she pointed when a key grated in the lock, and Grace Draper came in.

THAT last touch—the completing, perfecting finale of her cosmetic task—may take but an instant, but this instant added to all those that have vanished since HE arrived—well, who was it said that a woman's minute means an hour? But deep in his heart, he who marches up and down watching his motor car, waiting for her, knows that he'd wait a year if need be, for HER. For her eagerness to please him—her wish to appear her best—is but another proof of her great love!

THE HOME KITCHEN

Here Are Favorite Dishes of Several Foreign Nations

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON
The Authority on Home Cooking

UNUSUAL dishes are always of interest to the home cook who likes to have a few on her list to vary the family menu.

These dishes should include not only desserts, but those for the main courses as well.

Many of the homely dishes of foreign nations—those not too expensive to prepare—make a strong appeal for at least one trial, and in many cases the trial leads to their addition to the list of family favorites. The following are picked at random from a wide collection, and are novel enough to try:

Bohemian Cream Pie.

Line a pie plate with a good short pie-crust, being careful to prick it with a steel fork, so that it does not blister in the baking. Add a cupful of sugar to a cupful of heavy cream. Then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs and a teaspoonful of vanilla flavoring. Pour the cream into the crust and bake like a custard.

Bohemian Plum Dumplings.

Mix a cupful and a half of flour with a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter-teaspoonful of baking-powder, two beaten eggs, a teaspoonful of sugar and enough milk to make a rolling dough. Roll on a floured board, cut in two-inch squares. Place a large plum in the centre of each, adding a teaspoonful of sugar and a tiny piece of butter. Then fold over the dough and place the dumplings on top of salted, boiling water and cook from five to eight minutes. When done, serve with grated cheese, sugar and a little poppy-seed in melted butter for the sauce.

Roast Rabbit, Sour Cream Gravy.

This is also a favorite Bohemian recipe: Wash and salt a carefully cleaned rabbit. Boil together a cupful each of vinegar and water, a sliced onion, a sprig of thyme, two bay leaves, a bud of garlic, six cloves a teaspoonful of allspice, a small piece of green ginger and a few whole black peppers. Boil up, then cool and pour it over the rabbit, which should be cut in pieces. Marinate a day and night, turning the pieces daily. When ready to cook, drain lard with bacon, and place in a roaster with a little butter, two sliced onions and the strained marinade. Baste as the meat roasts with sour cream. When the meat is done, lift to a hot dish and add a cupful of sour cream to the dish gravy, and turn over the meat. Garnish with toast sippets and sprays of parsley.

Russian Salad.

Boil and devil six eggs, cutting them lengthwise. Coat the inside of a damp mould with aspic jelly, and put in a thin layer of caviar, then a layer of eggs, then a layer of caviar, then more jelly and set to harden. When ready to serve slice onto lettuce leaves and put a tablespoonful of well-seasoned mayonnaise on top. Garnish with a little finely minced red pepper.

German Cabbage.

After cutting out the hearts of one small white and one small red cabbage fill the centres with chopped pepper, onion, bud of garlic, a chopped apple and a small piece of pork. Boil in the usual way. When done, remove the fillings and chop coarsely. Then cover with a heavy cream sauce seasoned with a little nutmeg.

Mexican Rice.

Fry in a cupful of oil a chopped onion, a pepper, two tomatoes, and a sweet chilli. When soft, add three cupfuls of boiled rice. Mix, season, and let steam and cook for a few minutes, watching to prevent the mixture from burning.

YOUR HEALTH

How a Famous Singer Contrives to Keep Really Well

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

DR. COPELAND

WHEN one is interested in improving the health of the country it is encouraging to find a great artist setting a worthy example of how to live. The other day I read about the way Mme. Amelita Galli-Curci keeps her marvellous voice by preserving her body.

There are few persons who have better worked out the essentials of good health. So important does Mme. Galli-Curci consider physical vigor that she devotes as much time to exercise as she does to vocal practice.

In writing a little book on "Over-Weight," I railed against the limousine, saying:

"The automobile is the enemy of many a slim figure. Lolling on the cushions of a motor car will do more to put on flesh than almost any other habit."

Having this in mind, I was pleased to see what the great artist said on the same subject.

"Too many of us ride in limousines. They are a temptation, and I know that it is hard to struggle against them. But walking whenever it is possible is always best for the health."

We always think ideas are sensible if they agree with ours! I preach Mme. Galli-Curci's doctrine myself, as note these words from my little book:

"Never ride if you can walk, and, if you do ride, hold yourself erect. Don't permit yourself to slouch down in the seat. Your back, chest and abdominal muscles should be kept on tension. Don't let them relax and thus permit the fat gradually to crowd out your muscle tissue."

Mme. Galli-Curci walks four or five miles a day, even if she has to do it on the roof of a hotel. She uses a few simple calisthenics, ten minutes, night and morning.

In her regimen the corset is taboo, as also are tobacco, wine, tea and coffee. Water and milk are her beverages. The health officials are trying to get everybody to use a quart of milk a day, but this little lady does better—she drinks two quarts daily.

Ten hours are given to sleep, and she thinks it is not a bad plan to woo sleep by taking a big bowl of crackers and milk before retiring.

Fruit, particularly apples, pears and oranges, add to her "feeling of freshness and start the day right." Candy she never takes.

Not only is Mme. Galli-Curci a sanitarian, but she is a philosopher. Listen to her words:

"Too many of use are likely to think that worries injure our health. That is a mistaken idea. A little worry stirs up the blood. To worry is better than to be in a state of apathy. Apathy never gets you anywhere. When we are a little worried we are likely to bestir ourselves and create something that is worth while."

My hat is off to you, Madame!

Answers to Health Questions

H. A. Q—Will you kindly tell me the reason for cold hands and feet and a remedy for this condition?

• • •

M. A. M. Q—Would a circular movement of the arms used as a daily exercise tend to broaden the shoulders?

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Home—Happy Home

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

TROUBLE in the Balkans—Famous star sued for divorce—Millionaire deserts his family—Marriage is an old-fashioned superstition, says noted writer!

Dear me, what a world! Isn't there anything sane and happy and comfy in the news today?

There's the postman! I wonder what he's bringing? Bills, I suppose, and letters from people in trouble, and discouraged people and cross people—well, better open them, and get done with them.

Hello—here's one from the Dearest Girl.

It's been rather lonely since the Dearest Girl married and went away.

She's seen so many people—the Dearest Girl—artists and musicians and journalists and men of affairs. Actors she knows, and actresses, and once I thought the banker's son was going to be The One Man.

Nice fellow he was, too—the banker's son—in a mild way—plenty of money, too—what fun the Dearest Girl would have had spending it!

Europe, and Asia, and Africa, yellow sands and blue seas, and far countries—that was the plan.

A country home with a swimming pool and a tennis court, a city apartment all done in the very latest mode of decoration—theatres, the opera, parties, pretty clothes—Oh, it was quite a gay program!

And all at once the Dearest Girl said she'd changed her mind. She didn't want to travel—she wanted to stay at home. She didn't want an apartment—she wanted a house, a little one with a garden and plenty of pets—everything very simple and no fuss and feathers.

"Happy as Larks!"

And before you knew what it was all about, the little girl who seemed to you nothing but a child was married and gone.

Well, it's been two years now—I wonder if she ever thinks of Europe and Asia and Africa, and blue seas and wishes she hadn't been so—er—

Let's see what she has to say.

"I just wish that you could look in and see us here today. Jimsy is sitting on the kitchen table taking his bath and preening his wings. He sings the newest waltz-song and sings in perfect time, too.

"Bob is fussing around on chairs and lounge. He shouldn't be here by rights, but it is raining and he is such splendid, loyal company with his bright eyes and his wee stump of a tail.

"Then I got a recipe for the orange rolls we had at the Mirasole on the way up, and I am making them today. Then there is the ironing to do and a cake and some cookies to make, and the oranges to get ready for marmalade and the phonograph to play "Kathleen Mavourneen" and "She Is My Rosie," and the bedspread to embroider, and last but not least, the rain to listen to.

"Grace and Betty and Jay were over last evening and we all had supper together. The baby is a darling and as pretty as one small person could well be. We had lots of fun. The old folks have built a new home for themselves.

"In our yard the stocks are in bloom and the yellow jasmine and the purple violets, and the white lilac is turning green with new leaves and we have two baby rosebushes climbing for dear life to get to the top of the pergola and that before the jasmine does. Then we have a red Gen. Arthur and a Hoosier Beauty, real both. Near them are two Irish Elegance bushes and a yellow Lady Hillingdon and two white American Beauties.

"In front the lemon tree is green and the oleander is coming on at a famous rate of speed and the wisteria is beginning to climb.

"We are as happy as larks, but outside of that there's no news.

"Well, one little bird that I know has finished his morning ablution and is calling to be cleaned and tied up. He says, 'Sweet lovely day, hurrah!' then he whistles and then gives three cheers and a tiger.

"Best of love. "BETTS AND BOB AND JIMSY."

Well, what do you think of it?

Not a hint of Asia, or of Europe either, not a sigh for the big country home—not a whisper about the opera or the theatre.

Happy as a lark, and proud of it!

Why, it's like a page out of an old-fashioned book!

Bob and the Hoosier Beauty and Jimsy—and the baby roses and the Irish Elegance and the jasmine—what a garden—even if it is young and just beginning to grow.

And the rain on the roof, and the cake in the oven and Kathleen Mavourneen and the embroidered bedspread—dear me, what would you give to lift the roof off of that little house just for a second, and look in and catch some of the cheer and the simple comfort and the happiness?

I wish the wind could snatch some of it and blow it through the cities of the country—we need it—indeed we do.

Marriage an old-fashioned superstition?

Love an Empty Word?

Home, a passing institution?

Love a mere empty word?

You may have things sized up correctly enough in your own particular world, Mrs. Authoress.

But I believe the world is full of just such happy, comfy, sane, normal homes as this one, where Jimsy is learning to sing to the tune of the latest waltz-song and where there's a comforting smell of cake in the oven and cookies in the jar, and hot biscuits browning for tea. And it is just such homes as these that are going to hold this nation together in the troubled days that may be waiting for us.

Easy Ways to Guard Your Beauty

By LUCREZIA BORI
The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

LUCREZIA BORI

ALTHOUGH most of us look forward all winter to the first balmy spring days, when they finally begin to arrive we find that there's a fly in the ointment.

This is nothing more nor less than the winds that presage warm weather. They must come before real spring is with us and it seems they can't come without bringing ill-effects in their wake.

These ill effects, of course, need not be tragic in their results, but they are sure come because they do impair our beauty to a certain extent.

The impairment comes in the form of chapped skin, chapped lips, straying locks and red hands. Before that longed-for balmy weather which makes us all feel younger and full of life, we must go through this season which never helps any of us to appear at our best.

It's very trying, on an early spring day, to be out and have the wind loosen your hat till your hair streams down from it in several ungainly locks. This alone makes you more or less unhappy, and to add to your discomfiture, your skin is likely to become rough and unattractive and your lips to chap until you feel that they will surely crack if you speak or risk smiling.

Now, if you'll give these things a little forethought, you can practically eliminate the effects which so mar your beauty.

In the first place, if you treat your skin to a good skin food, you'll keep it in such a smooth, well-oiled condition that rough winds won't find it nearly so easy to wrinkle and chap.

Here's an effective skin food which you may also use for a massage cream:

Lanolin	2 ounces
Paraffin	½ ounce
Petrolatum	6 ounces
Cocoa butter	1 ounce
Rose-water	4 ounces
Oil of rose	4 drops
Alcohol	1 teaspoonful

Melt the first four oils together over a low burner, then when the mixture is quite cool add your four ounces of rose-water. While this first preparation is congealing, whip in your four drops of oil of rose and your teaspoonful of alcohol.

Rub a thin layer of this into your skin at night when you go to bed. You can also rub it into your hands to soften and feed them.

Here's a good lip salve:

Cocoa butter	½ ounce
Pure lard	4 ounces
White wax	½ ounce
Powdered alum	½ ounce

Melt all of these together by placing them in a pan over a bowl of warm water. Color the mixture with carmine. Rub this into your lips whenever you feel that they are becoming too dry.

Now with your skin and lips properly cared for, the next step toward comfort on a raw spring day is a neat little veil that's becoming, that holds your hat well on and every hair in place. You can be smartly dressed and appear at your best despite the weather.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

In receiving flowers from a young man, should you 'phone him and thank him, or should you wait until he 'phones you?

Should a young man suggest the time to go home when calling on a young lady, or should she?

A BLONDE.

A BLONDE: Telephone the young man as soon as the flowers arrive and thank him.

The young man should suggest going home. But if he stays too late it is entirely proper for the young lady to ask him to excuse her.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl who will be 19 years old this month. I am going with a nice young man seven years my senior.

He is held in the highest esteem among our people of this city. I like him very much, and he says he loves me, but the last time he came to see me he told me it was going to be the last, as I won't ever let him hug or kiss me.

I have been going with this young man for four months, and he said there was no harm in it, as that was what pretty girls were made for.

But I want to keep on the right road, as I have no mother or father, so please advise me what to do.

THE GIRL WITHOUT THE PAINT AND LIPSTICK.

THE GIRL WITHOUT THE PAINT AND LIPSTICK: Don't allow this young man to whom you are not engaged to kiss you, my dear. He will love and respect you all the more for refusing him, although he may not admit it. If he is a proper friend for you he will not give you up because you are a dignified and ladylike girl.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I have been going with a young man for over a year.

It seems as if several persons are trying to break our friendship. Last week someone told him a few things that made him act very coolly to me.

Is it right for me to go to him and find out what is wrong? They tell me I am running after him when I do this. I like this young man very much, and do not want him to be angry with me, and still I do not want him or anyone else to THink I am trying to run after him.

FLORENCE.

FLORENCE: Don't go to the young man, but ask him to call on you. Then have a talk.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY, APRIL 3.

An important day may be looked for under this day's planetary operations. It is possible that there will be an opportunity for an unexpected change, radical in its nature, and probably involving a journey or travel. This should result in steady growth and financial reward. The tendency to worry should not be permitted to cloud the promised prosperity. There may be some domestic disappointment.

Those whose birthday it is may look for an important year, with good opportunity for progress and financial success. It may require change and travel. Refrain from worry and safeguard family health and harmony. A child born on this day will have many opportunities, and will be generally successful in its undertakings. It should be trained in an optimistic outlook.

This Evening Gown Tops a Gracefully-Draped Gold-Satin Skirt with a Bodice of Gold Embroidered Net.

COSTUMES which exploit varied tones of one color are much in vogue and when cleverly executed achieve effects of unbelievable loveliness.

Here's an evening gown that tops a gracefully draped gold-satin skirt with a bodice of gold-embroidered net. The skirt section extends high up upon the bodice in the back, giving the straight line which is so smart at present.

The centre ornament is of gold and amber, while gold brocaded slippers and gold stockings complete the effect.

6 ST. LOUIS BANDITS

were in command of the truck. Both were armed with .45 calibre pistols.

According to both the robbers drove up from the rear and covered them before they had a chance to reach for their guns.

Two of the bandits jumped from their machine when the mail truck was brot to a halt, according to the two postal employes, and leveled guns at them. One of the robbers carried a revolver in each hand while the other leveled a sawed-off gun at the driver of the truck.

Four of the bandits remained seated in their machine, each armed with sawed-off shot guns.

The bandits then directed Cunningham to drive towards the river front and when within a block of the river, commanded the chauffeur to turn into an alley.

After unloading the nine pouches Dorlac and Cunningham were placed in the cage of the truck and locked in. The men shouted for help after the bandits had made their escape but they failed to attract any attention for several minutes. A negro, living in the district, heard their cries, and ran to the scene. It was discovered that the bandits had failed to fasten the lock on the truck. The truck was driven to the police station where the robbery was reported.

The mail was to have been divided between the bridge and Cupples station. The bridge station serves the city's commission houses while the latter is located in the manufacturing districts. The mail for both stations at this time of the month always carries large sums of money, according to post-office authorities. While the exact amount of money lost cannot be determined for some time, it was said that it could be expected to run into "six figures."

at any hour of the day, by phone, or in person. Each man and woman will be rated according to past experience as to how they have paid their bills, the result being, that we will have accurate data on practically every man and woman in this locality.

"We have affiliated ourselves with similar organizations in other cities and ratings will be exchanged with them for new people moving in or old residents leaving. Credit will not be extended promiscuously or as freely as some firms have done heretofore, unless the party seeking it has the right sort of rating and the merchants want to impress upon everyone the necessity of having a good rating and keeping it good.

"There is nothing more important to anyone than their credit standing in the community and as practically every business house in the city will be served by this new Bureau, the question of how each and every one is rated, should be a matter, not only of pride, but should also be considered from a business standpoint, for unless ratings are good, the members of this Bureau are not obligated to extend any credit whatsoever.

"After the system is installed and in operation, which will be about April 15, supplementary reports will be made each week and changes in ratings from bad to good and vice versa will be a feature of this plan that will keep each person's record up to date, so that members will be assured of receiving current ratings each time the central office is called and so that the public will be rated as they should be at all times."

4,000,000 OHIO EDUCATORS TO MEET THIS WEEK

School Men to Discuss Objectives of Education; Business Men of Programs

COLUMBUS, O., April 2. — To discuss vital questions of modern education more than 4000 Ohio educators are expected to gather here next Thursday, Friday and Saturday for the third annual session of the Ohio State Educational Conference under the auspices of the college of education, Ohio State University.

The specific aim of the meetings will be to discuss "Objectives in Education," to discover what modern education is seeking to accomplish thru the schools of the state. Three general and 27 sectional meetings are on the three day program. Friday will be the big day of the conference when 24 sectional or specialized meetings will be held.

Ninety speakers are listed on the program. Sixty-seven formal addresses are scheduled in addition to numerous papers and several clinics and demonstrations. Round table discussions will follow most of the addresses at the sectional meetings. Speakers from all parts of the country east of the Mississippi river in addition to many representing all phases of Ohio's school system have been obtained for the conference.

Business interests of the state have been invited to participate in the conference. Dean George F. Arps of the college of education in pointing out the intimate relationship existing between industry and public education declared "Recent tendencies clearly indicate that industry is not only supporting technical and trade education, but is conceiving education broadly from the viewpoint of effective citizenship."

With this in mind two of Columbus' "big" business men have been given places on the program. At the sectional meeting Friday afternoon on industrial and vocational education, W. A. Grieves, secretary and employment manager of the Jeffrey Manufacturing Co., will discuss "What Type of Man does the Employer Want." R. H. Schryver, president of the Citizens' Trust and Savings Bank, Columbus, will speak on "Objectives in High School Commercial Education from the Viewpoint of the Business Man" on Friday morning, at the sectional meeting on commercial education.

For the first time the parent-teacher bodies of the state will be represented with a sectional program over which Mrs E. M. Poston, of Columbus, will preside. Mrs. A. H. Reeves, editor of the Child Welfare Magazine, Philadelphia, will be the chief speaker at this meeting Friday morning.

The three general sessions will be held Thursday evening, Friday morning and Saturday morning in the university gymnasium. The speakers at these meetings will be Prof. S. S. Colvin, Columbia University, Prof. C. H. Judd, University of Chicago, Prof. W. C. Bagley, Columbia University, Prof. G. A. Works, Cornell University, and President W. O. Thompson and Prof. B. H. Bode, of Ohio State University.

The other sectional meetings include—biological science, clinical psychology, educational and intelligence tests, European history, high school principals, Latin, mathematics, teacher training, American history, art, city superintendents, elementary principals, elementary teachers, English, high school principals, home economics, junior high school principals, modern languages, nonbiological science, and physical education.

ARMCO CLUB SUPT. GAINS 30 POUNDS BY TAKING TANLAC

"To my mind there is nothing to equal the Tanlac treatment. It built me up thirty pounds, and I'll always give it my unlimited endorsement," is the emphatic statement of J. M. Simpson, superintendent of the Armco Club, Zanesville, Ohio.

"A few months ago I was going down hill fast, and couldn't find out what the trouble was or get anything to help me. I felt sick all over, had no strength or energy, and as for eating, that was the last thing I wanted to do. I fell off to a hundred and fifty-five pounds and was so short of breath I had to rest several times a day.

"My troubles were mighty bad, but Tanlac made short work of them. My appetite is a wonder now. I have got back my old weight of a hundred and eighty-five, and feel as strong and hard as iron. I'm always telling somebody about Tanlac, for it sure does the work."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute Over 35-million bottles sold.

Must Know Truck Soil To Advise Treatment

Inquiries regarding fertilizers for different truck crops cannot always be answered promptly by Experiment Station horticulturists because the queries give no clue to the nature of the soil and its previous treatment.

To advise intelligently regarding the use of fertilizers is difficult at best, it is claimed, because of the variations in soils, crop needs, and other factors.

Senator Burke's Lamentation

THERE will be little disposition to take issue with State Senator Burke's charge that in the present session of the General Assembly the major legislative enactments have been put thru by the politicians for Privilege and that government of, by and for the people has been a negligible quantity.

We are perfectly willing to concede Senator Burke's sincerity, but when the burden of his complaint is that the legislature has failed to enact his minimum wage bill, honesty compels the statement that he is either woefully lacking in economic knowledge or he is no different from any other politician who seeks votes by a demagogic protestation of love for the oppressed wage earner, either male or female.

All his proposed legislation for the protection of labor is of a piece with those federal enactments of his party, such as the rural credits bill and the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill. Senator Burke and Congressman Knight are types of so-called progressive Republicans. While believing and supporting the cardinal principle of the party, the protective tariff, they arouse themselves to righteous indignation when they behold the practical application and the inevitable results of the policies they espouse.

We should like to ascertain the reasoning process of such men as Senator Burke, Representative Knight, United States Senator Capper and former Senator Beveridge when they maintain that a protective tariff, a federal credit law for farmers and minimum wage laws are justifiable economically or that they will do a particle of good for the recipients of their coddling. For instance, we should like to inquire of Senator Burke, assuming that his minimum wage proposal will eventually be enacted into law, what ultimate good it will accomplish for the wage earner?

We should like to inquire of Senator Capper why his rural-credits bill is necessary or why it should be necessary to "protect labor?" Does it never occur to Republicans of this type that, no matter how honest they may be in their positions, they are so lame in their economic reasoning that the standpat element of their party has, in the long run, absolutely nothing to fear from them?

All the ills that men of this type are fighting are economic. Yet they come and they go, like former Senator Beveridge, and leave nothing behind in the way of substantial, permanent achievement. That they may be honest and, up to a certain point, fearless, may be conceded, but in the end their honesty and courage, being wholly misguided, gets them—nor us for whom they profess to strive—nothing.

The test of this class of men in public life is a probe of their economic views. And when they publicly proclaim it to be their belief that a protective tariff really "protects" the wage earner; when they openly maintain a high income tax is the accepted means of "making the rich pay their share of the taxes;" when they hold that a minimum wage law will ameliorate the lot of distressed manual toilers; regardless of their mental honesty, they have only succeeded in harshly indicting their own intellectual acumen and blazoning before the world the density of their economic ignorance.

These men doubtless are plunged into deep perplexity when they reflect that their own angelic milk and water reforms fall by the wayside while the crafty and diabolical schemes of the standpatters flourish in legislative halls like the green bay tree, and this year after year. The answer is not hard to find.

The pale reforms they advocate are impotent and sterile. This a great many people already know at the time of their proposal, and the rest soon find it out. As a result, whenever by chance they are tried, no one ever gets anywhere by means of them. But when the standpatters are in power, as they are about four decades out of five, the rest of us, Lazarus-like, are at least sure to get a share of the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table.

Would-be leaders of the Beveridge, Knight, Burke type should see themselves as others see them. They advocate ridiculous, indefensible economic policies, even as do the standpatters they so much profess to despise, and when the fruits of their economic absurdities are garnered they forthwith proceed to kick up an awful muss and demand more legislation to counteract the full results of the economic legal monstrosities they help bind about the people's necks.

Just now the tempest in the sugar bowl is a case in point. The Hoovers and Cappers and most of the other alleged Republican "progressives" were hell-bent on securing the enactment of the Fordney tariff. In that tariff was the enhanced sugar duty. It was put there—and the Cappers and Hoovers and Knights know it—to repay the sugar magnates for their 1920 campaign contributions. The standpat element in their party frankly declared that if they won the tariff would go up. Did these "progressives" expect when the tariff went up on the necessities of life that the prices would come down?

When men of the Burke type kick up a blinding dust about minimum wage enactments they fix their status, in the minds of thousands of thinking people, as statesmen or leaders of economic thot. Regardless of their honesty they are fake leaders and, because they are honest, they are infinitely more dangerous than the blatant demagog, who because of his blatancy, proclaims himself a demagog.

Did anyone ever hear of Beveridge getting down to brass tacks on taxation? Capper approaches fundamentals in this respect, but he always shies at the ultimate truth. Why? Because if he told what he knew he would lose prestige, temporarily, with the farmer vote which, for his immediate purposes he prefers to coddle—AND DECEIVE—with his worse than useless farm credits bill. Measures of this kind will never get the farmer anywhere except to bewilder him, to keep his mind from the real economic truth and, eventually, to put him in a mental mood for all sorts of indefensible socialistic schemes.

None of these self-proclaimed "progressives" are willing to give the people the one thing they need—FREEDOM. Time was when our legislative halls were never burdened with all this dangerous clamor of protection for capital, protection for labor, and, in these later and more degenerate times, protection for the farmer.

Do our self-constituted guardians in both parties not see that the one thing the people need, the one boon for capital, labor and the rural folk, is not more coddling, not more bonuses and subventions, not more tariffs and minimum wage laws and governmental credits and legislative panaceas, but a return to the hands-off policy of the early days of the Republic?

Do they not realize that real freedom, freedom to trade, freedom of local communities to run their own schools and roads and fiscal affairs, freedom from distant bureaus that already rival the hideous bureaucracy of the Romanoffs, freedom from crushing imposts for the maintenance of vast fleets and armies and freedom from the blighting, corroding effects of a system of insidious indirect taxation is all that is needed to restore us to the normal, manly independence that marked the earlier years of the Republic?

Does not Senator Burke know that, in the face of the steadily increasing capitalization of land values the little temporary good that he might hope to accomplish by his minimum wage law would be crushed beneath the upper and nether millstones of inexorable economic law? Has he never stopped to reflect upon the phenomenon of steadily rising costs and the declining purchasing power of every medium of exchange in the world?

Has he made no inquiry into the relationships of the three factors in production, Land, Labor and Capital, and the mal-adjustments into which they have fallen precisely because of the tampering with basic economic law of which he and his so-called "progressive" colleagues are quite as guilty as the profiteers and politicians he and his kind so loudly and piously berate?

If he has failed in these inquiries he will fail—has already failed—in leadership. It is no sign of statesmanship to pass laws clearly out of harmony with the natural scheme of things and then rant sanctimoniously because the very thing happens that the "malefactors of great wealth" proposed should happen. It is not in line with permanent achievement to approve of special legislative privilege and then move the heavens for the enactment of more laws to alleviate the very evils created by the original enactment.

Men who love to bask in the political lime light may hold their places for a time by specious appeals to the unthinking, but a permanent place in the affections of the people is gained and kept only by an intelligent and courageous adherence, not to mere platitudes, but to the eternal verities.

New York Day-by-Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, April 2. — A page from the diary of a modern Samuel Pepys: Up very betimes and across the town and, meeting Lillian Lafferty (Beatrice Fairfax), talked awhile and thence to the office of R. Davis, the magazine editor.

Great talk of the play "Reigen" and its demoralizing influence. Al beit I have not beheld it, I feel strongly there are too many fanatics with jaundiced inhibitions in this poor world. And, too, most of our musical plays are mere anatomical exhibits.

Home where came a brave letter from LeRoy Ripley, the limner, in far off Japan filled with coaxing phrases about geisha girls and wondrous days. And ending, "How now, Mr. Pepys, a pity 'tis you're old."

All the evening doing my stint, fairish well, and then at my zither playing "Clemintine," "Long, Long Ago," "Walt for the Wagon" and "Little Brown Jug," all very sweet, and far better than the jazz strantagems of the day. So to bed.

They sit at a table in a big restaurant and when lights go dim and the "spot" floods them they glide out on the floor in a ball-room dance. They appear at seven different cafes during the evening. The other night a gentleman who had evidently drunk his dinner weaved over to their table and asked the lady if she would do the honor of dancing with him. She curtly refused.

"I don't blame her," he said when he returned to his table. "Asking a professional dancer to dance is about as foolish as inviting a mail carrier to take a walk."

Down at the bureau where peddlers procure licenses to hawk their wares on the street there is a constant line of human misfits—a veritable army of woe. Chiefly it is composed of the blind, halt and the lame. Not a word appears to be passed among them. They stand dumbly awaiting their turn and afterward slink away. It is a depressing sight.

Gloria, little daughter of Caruso the tenor, is following the Caruso tradition and is learning to sing. On the fiftieth anniversary of her father's birth a group of reporters called to see the child. Holding her mother's hand, the child sang, Vicino 'o Mare, the Neapolitan love song with which her daddy used to sing her to sleep. Someone asked her, "Where is your daddy now?"

In a voice bright with assurance she replied, "Daddy's in heaven. That's in the sky. And he sings with the angels. He sings Marta."

One of the best bachelor's clubs in town has employed an expert chemist whose sole duty is to test various brands of liquor brot into the club by guests. Recently three of the veteran members were stricken with illnesses the doctors said were due to illicit concoctions. The board of directors decided it was not wise to take any more chances.

Somewhere the sun is shining but not for a Greek hat snatcher in one of the gaudiest Broadway cafes. A gentleman proffered him a ten cent tip. The h. s. examined it and said with a sneer, "Take this back and buy you a soda, you spendthrift." He was removed to a hospital with both eyes closed tight and the little birds tweeting merrily.

WORDS of WISE MEN

Work today but plan for tomorrow.

Great minds are the lighthouses of humanity.

The greatest of faults is to be conscious of none.

The bold pursue their game with more passion, endeavor and application, and therefore they often succeed.

Be less eager to pass others than to surpass yourself.

Understanding is the first great need in all human relations.

Most of us talk on principle, but act on interest.

None are so fond of secrets as those who do not mean to keep them.

Many, wanting wit, affect gravity and go by the name of solid men.

Thrift is a rich contribution to the building of character.

Silent contempt is often the sharpest reproof.

The penalty of selfishness is to be left solitary.

Grumbling at your lot merely makes you a lot worse.

It's a sound policy to keep your balance—personally and financially.

If you have done all you possibly can, you have done all you ought.

There is no purpose served in knowing more of good conduct than we practice.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY
From The Tribune Files

ement for a general Thursday half holiday in Coshocton during the summer was started at a meeting of ministers and business men held last Sunday evening.

The shortage of eggs which this city has experienced since the flood last Tuesday was effectively eliminated Tuesday, the first day that farmers from the north and west could enter the city without ferrying from Roscoe.

A party of searchers from Brinkhaven arrived at Nellie Tuesday seeking the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Workman and six-month-old child who were drowned when their home near Brinkhaven was swept away by the flood last Tuesday.

A daughter was born Monday to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gaumer.

Every burial casket in the city has been used and as result, it was necessary to have several hauled overland from Dresden Tuesday morning.

Early Tuesday morning the water had receded from the Roscoe road and altho the bricks are torn up in some places traffic has again been resumed.

According to reports received by the county commissioners, six bridges on the Walhonding and one on the Muskingum river were swept away by the flood, and a half-dozen others were more or less damaged.

WALT MASON

CONFESSION

When I was crippled by the flu, it seemed my end was near, and every time I sneezed, kerchoo, I thot of hearse and bier. By day and night I coughed and barked, with dull and sick'ning thud; to Old Doc Casket I remarked, "I guess my name is Mud. You've done your best with pill and yarb to save me from death's snare; but I must don the ghastly garb that only dead men wear. When I have heaved my final smile, I wish you'd see James Skow, and tell him I'm the sinner vile who shot his bob-tailed cow. And kindly tell old Mrs. Pete remorse is in my cup; I scattered chunks of poisoned meat, and killed her Maltese pup. And Grocer Simpson will recall a certain bogus V; I turn my shamed face to the wall—he got that bill from me. And tell Assessor Jinks, kerchoo, when I the ghost shall yield, that what I told him wasn't true—my assets I concealed. Tell all these people I regret these crimes and many more; confession is the safest bet, when one is at death's door. I'll sleep much better 'neath the dew, in solitudes unfenced, if you will bear my words, kerchoo, to those I've sinned against. What's that you say? The crisis past, and I'll recover soon? Well, just forget those pipe-dreams vast you lately heard me croon. One cannot keep the truth in view when he is racked with pain, and, as you know, kerswoosh, keerchoo, I was not strictly sane."

PEOPLE'S FORUM

THE WHEAT GROWERS PLIGHT

Editor The Tribune:

All over the country people are asking "Is the present business boom going to last?" There is no doubt that certain industries are experiencing great prosperity. Business, measured by bank debits in twenty-six cities has increased 15 1-2 per cent during the last month over the corresponding period of last year. Building permits in nineteen cities during the month of February has increased 64.8 per cent over last year. Crude oil production has increased 2 1-2 million barrels for the month over last year. We all know that steel production is nearing capacity. In many other industries it is the same. There is no doubt about the fact that the manufacturing part of the country is showing every evidence of great prosperity.

But only half the people in this country are in the business of manufacturing goods. Half our population is rural. It is axiomatic that as our farmers prosper, so prospers our whole country. While pig iron prices are 70 per cent above pre-war prices and production is approaching the maximum, the price of wheat, our greatest food crop—a crop which is grown by one-third of our farmers—is little above the pre-war basis. This is a fair example of what the farmer is up against. The goods which he has to buy cost something like 60 per cent more than they did before the war, while what he has to sell brings just about the price it did before the war. There can be no return to real prosperity until the proper equilibrium has been established between agriculture and industry.

About one-third of our farmers grow wheat. In some parts of the country wheat is the only source of income. In 1921 over 62 million acres of wheat were harvested. Wheat constitutes an important part of our domestic commerce and enters into the trade to a far greater extent than any other crop except cotton, and the South which produces cotton is dependent upon the North for its wheat and flour. The manufacturing cities of the East depend upon the Midwest for most of their bread supplies.

Wheat and flour normally contribute a large part of the value of our exports and thus directly affect our international trade. It is this international trade in wheat which is causing the farmer his greatest trouble today. Normally the farmers of this county export 170 million bushels of wheat each year, largely to European markets. The European markets not only influence our values but are today reflecting prices to our farmers that are in many cases below the actual cost of production.

FORUM CONTINUED

This is not a temporary condition. The future is not bright. Wheat growing sections in other parts of the world with cheap lands, cheap labor and lower standards of living are able to make money on a price for wheat which would net our farmers a loss. The European market is weak and apparently cannot absorb our surplus this year. Thus the solution of the farmers' problem will lie either in a decreased production or an increased consumption in the United States.

To reduce production is destructive and would involve the establishment of a vast machinery of directional allocation that would break down by reason of the very inequalities it would erect.

To increase consumption is constructive and under existing circumstances seems capable of accomplishment. Let us turn again to a contemplation of our surplus wheat, 170 million bushels annually. This seems a large amount, yet reduced simply to terms of individual consumption, it is no more than a single slice of bread or its equivalent in wheat products at each meal.

During the war we were asked to use less wheat. Our wheat supply was needed for our soldiers. Now there is a surplus of wheat in the country. It is necessary that we reverse things and eat more wheat foods to provide a market for this grain which represents the work of 2 million farmers. The results would be far-reaching in their consequence. The wheat movement possesses fundamental principles not inherent in any others. In the race the cheapest and best food will win out. Pound for pound and dollar for dollar wheat possesses more food value than any other food in the world. And wheat foods are never eaten alone. An increase in the eating of wheat means an increase in the use of other primary farm products.

Prosperity for the farmer in the United States lies in an increase in the use of wheat foods in this country. Prosperity for the business men in this country will come with an increase in the buying power of our farm population

Disease Resistant Tomatoes Are Best

Disease resistant strains of tomatoes are safest for planting in districts which have become infested with tomato wilt fungus.

Greenhouse soil in which the disease has gained a foothold may be sterilized with steam, but plant pathologists have not yet found a means of controlling the disease after it attacks the plant it is stated at the Ohio Experiment Station.

However, they have with the aid of growers been able by selecting seed plants to secure immune strains, which they recommend for planting. These strains may be obtained from reliable seedsmen

SEED POTATO GROWERS TO FORM ASSN.

May Drop Initial Plan of Affiliating With Existing Group; Expect Decision Friday

Ohio growers who want to see seed potato certification put on something of the same scale which makes Michigan seed spuds famous the country over will meet Friday, March 30, at Sandusky, and decide whether such work should be made one with that of the Ohio Seed Improvement Association, or whether potato men should organize separately.

Gail Abbott of Medina, Daniel Egbert of Tiffin, and William McClarren of Delaware compose the committee of three representing in this matter a small group of large growers who in the past have had potatoes certified after inspection by an official of the State Department of Agriculture.

This plan was satisfactory, it is said, in all ways except one. It did not allow expansion of the enterprise. Accordingly, the group petitioned the present state seed association to add potato certification to its list of activities. Association directors last week granted the request.

Now appear, however, differences in the licensing requirements for potato and for grain inspectors, and other details which may make it advisable to organize the potato men separately.

Representatives of the seed association and of the Ohio State University, which handles the inspection and certification end of the enterprise, will meet the potato growers at Sandusky Friday. The meeting is expected to bring a definite decision.

OHIO LEADS AGAINST MONGREL LIVESTOCK

Expected to Round Out Year as First State in Enrollment of "Scrub-Free Farms"

When the standing of states in the national Purebred Sires Enrollment Campaign is announced from Washington, April 10, it appeared almost certain that Ohio will enter, upon its fourth quarter-year as leader of the United States in this effort.

The campaign which has been running a number of years, is under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture. The idea is to pit state against state as to the number of farmers who will pledge themselves to have between their fences in the future nothing but pure bred livestock, birds and beasts.

During the quarter just concluded Ohio added 189 such enrollments to 2,293, its previous total. This makes 2,482 Ohio farmers who now have taken the pledge against scrub stock.

Virginia which for a number of years led the country in scrub swatting, stood second to Ohio at the last quarterly report from Washington, with 1,939 enrollments. To have passed Ohio during the present quarter, stockmen at the Ohio State University point out, Virginia would have to have added more than 500 new farms to the scrub-free list.

More than 30 states are competing. To hold top position is regarded as excellent advertisement of a state's livestock supremacy. Quarterly reports from Washington are widely circulated in all competing states.

During the past quarter, Miami, Putnam, and Defiance counties were those in Ohio which showed the greatest activity. Enrollments are made by farmers through their county agents.

CHESTNUT BLIGHT

Chestnut trees are subject to blight, which may be held in check by cutting out and burning diseased branches before new growth starts in the spring.

Botanists of the Experiment Station recommend cutting the infected branches well back into the healthy wood and painting the wounds with coal tar. If badly infested it may be best to remove the entire tree and burn the diseased part.

The [illegible] which are being cultivated for [illegible] are subject to the disease as the [illegible] Specimens of diseased [illegible] may be sent to the Experiment Station, Wooster, Ohio, for identification. Reports of outbreaks of the disease are also [illegible].

HARDING PLANS

pected to be based on three principal cornerstones:

1—What has been done in the far east,

2—In Latin America, and,

3—In Europe.

In the first case the achievements of the Washington armament conference and the four power pact, guaranteeing the peace of the Pacific will be held an epochal accomplishment, and as having prevented a possible war with Japan, which many international observers had predicted for many years.

In Latin-America, the recent Central American conference in which most of the small republics of the south agreed to stop the continual petty warfare of the last quarter of a century, will be pointed to as a tremendous step in the direction of permanent peace in this hemisphere.

American mediation of the dispute between Peru and Chili and between Costa Rica and Panama will be dealt with in this connection.

The European policy of the administration is looked upon by the president's advisers as being simple of presentation. The president will simply state that conditions in Europe have been such as to preclude American intervention without becoming hopelessly entangled in old world politics and consequently the United States has refrained from "butting in" abroad in a situation where American help was unwelcome.

Plans for President Harding's trip west are now taking definite shape. According to the tentative program, the president probably will leave Washington the middle of June for about six weeks. Originally it had been intended that he should make about twenty speeches in as many western and midwestern cities, but this program has been broadened to include at least thirty. A complete program will be worked out, however, before the president's return to Washington the last of this week.

Mr. Harding was on the last lap of his vacation today. Here in Georgia he continued his Florida habit of daily golf, going out soon after breakfast to spend the entire forenoon on the links. Representative Frederick Gillette, speaker of the house, joined the party here and was one of the president's golf companions today.
